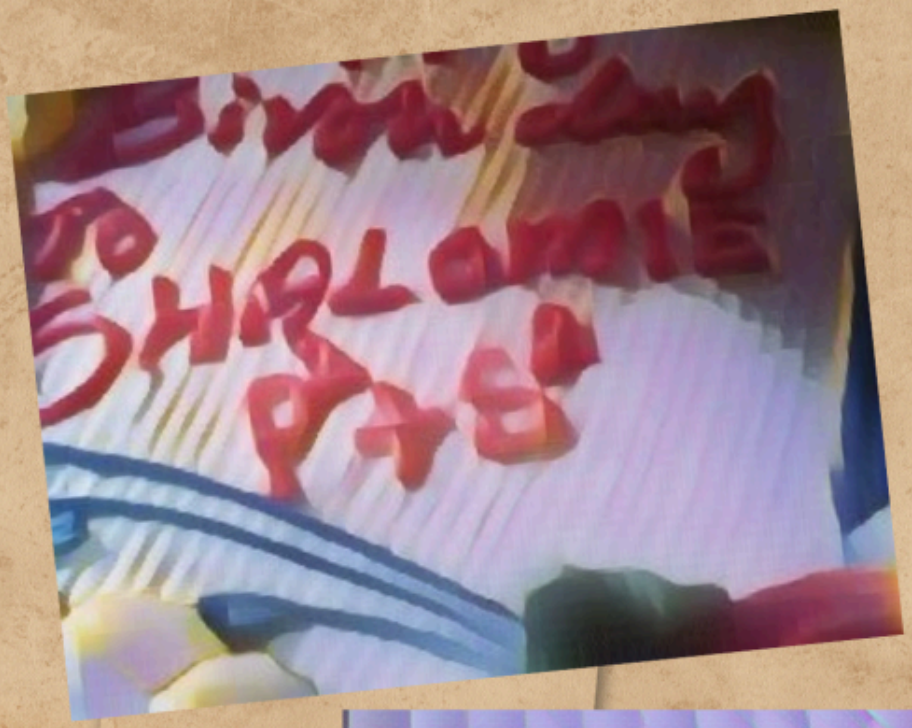
Birthday 2013



On the night before my birthday, around 12 midnight, Pradee and Sai paid me a surprise visit. I was genuinely surprised😲 and a bit fearful because I had never experienced such surprises before. I was also concerned about what my parents would think. We chatted until 2 or 3 🕛in the morning. During their visit, they gifted me two girl statues. Both Sai and Pradee left their signatures on my hands. At first, I thought the green one was from Pradee, and the pink one was from Sai, but it turned out to be the other way around (I still have that pink statue that Pradee initially gifted me in 2023).

After they left, I asked my mom if my dad seemed angry or upset about the surprise visit, but she assured me that everything was fine, and they both handled it calmly. I felt relieved.

After many years, I had the opportunity to celebrate my birthday with a cake 🎂. It was all thanks to Prici’s plan. She collected ten rupees from each student in our class, including Pradee, but unfortunately, Sandy was absent that day. It was my entire class, 12th A1, and I couldn’t believe how lucky I was to have this chance. They all gifted me a cute teddy bear doll 🧸and a heartfelt greeting card. I gathered signatures from every student in my class for this birthday card.

I had the pleasure of cutting a cake in the classroom, as it was a half-day class. Later, when I returned home, I was pleasantly surprised by a visit from Chandana and Kalai, along with Prici, Pradee, and Sai. We cut another cake🎂, and they playfully applied cake on me. The cake was returned by P+S square, symbolizing Pradee, Prici, Shalo, and Sai. We even had a Facebook group for our close-knit circle. It was truly a fabulous day🥰.
